WELCOME MESSAGE

The 12th World Conference on Transport Research is held in Lisbon, Portugal, and hosted by Instituto Superior Técnico (IST). IST, created in 1911, is the largest and most reputed school of Engineering, Science and Technology in Portugal. R&D at IST is performed in institutes, research centers and research groups, among which CESUR, Centre for Urban and Regional Systems, at the Department of Civil Engineering and Architecture, where the group of researchers organizing the Conference belongs.

The organizing team is an emerging young group of great potential, with internationally recognized Transport researchers and a wide and multidisciplinary research spectrum. Its 10 permanent members in charge of research and teaching, plus 20 to 25 students with scholarships for Master and PhD courses, usually cover multiple nationalities from different continents. The senior members of this team have had a strong involvement in WCTRS activities since 1992. Making the 12th WCTR Conference in Lisbon is of great importance for the networking and boost of the younger generation of this group.

The XII World Conference on Transport Research 2010 in Lisbon has received the formal endorsement of representatives of all stakeholders, namely: Government, Public Administration, Foundation for Science and Technology, Universities, and Transport and Infrastructure Operators.

The conference facilities are located by the Tagus River, near one of the best known monuments of Lisbon, the Belém Tower, and a few minutes away from the city centre, in an area served by several modes of transportation. With functional buildings holding up to 4,000 people in diversified configurations, with sophisticated technical equipment for projection, sound and lighting systems.

In addition, the XVI Pan-American Conference of Traffic and Transportation Engineering and Logistics will be held immediately after the 12th WCTR Conference allowing participants of the two conferences to enjoy this unique networking opportunity having a full week in the beautiful city of Lisbon. The organizing team welcomes you in Lisbon.

José VIEGAS and Rosário MACÁRIO
Chair and Vice-chair of the conference

ABOUT THE WCTRS

Objective

The objective of the WCTRS is to provide a forum for the interchange of ideas among transportation researchers, managers, policy makers, and educators from all over the world, from a perspective which is multi-modal, multi-disciplinary, and multi-sectoral. The Society has become a primary forum for such international exchanges in transportation; the World Conferences are the place where leading transportation professionals from all countries convene to learn from one another.

One unique role for the WCTR is to identify emerging issues and opportunities of a policy, managerial, or technical nature which will influence transportation research, policy, management and education in future years. In this way, the Society and the Conference intend to play a strong leadership role in bridging the gaps between research and practice.

Research areas

The Society is multi-modal, multi-disciplinary, and multi-sectoral. The members span almost all aspects of transportation research, planning, policy and management. In general, the World Conferences do mirror these breadths of interests. WCTRS membership currently represents 64 countries and aims to extend its influence.

The World Conference on Transport Research (WCTR) is organized every three years under the authority of a permanent body, the WCTR Society. It brings together managers, policy analysts, advisers, operators and academics, all with a common interest in promoting state of the art and state of the practice in all areas of transport research.
